Now thinking about specific legislation being considered by the Colorado legislature…

7.   Like all states, Colorado workers are allowed to form a labor union if fifty percent of the workers plus one in a company vote to do so.

But in Colorado a second vote of seventy-five percent of workers is required if the labor union wants to INCLUDE A REQUIREMENT THAT ALL workers, whether they want to or not, to pay dues or fees from their paycheck as a condition of their continued employment.

The Colorado legislature is considering eliminating that second vote and to allow a labor union to deduct membership fees or dues from every employee's paycheck after just the first election of fifty percent plus one.
